

every thing you've ever done, good and bad, and still he loves you with all his heart. When you're having a tough time and nothing seems to be going right, he's your greatest cheerleader. He wants you to understand that no matter how things turn out, he loves you just for trying. He hurts when you hurt. He cries when you cry. He loves you so much that it breaks his heart when you're suffering. He wants you to know that you can come to him any time you need support and he'll be there for you. Since he's your biggest fan, whatever is important to you is important to him, too. God doesn't care if you're a star. He only wants you to do your best and to treat other people with kindness and compassion. Even if you finish last, he holds you in first place in his heart. Life isn't always the way it seems. We envy people who are rich and famous, but if they don't have God in their life, their existence is empty. That's why so many of them turn to drugs and alcohol.

Next time you're feeling down because life didn't work out the way you wanted, remember who is cheering for you. Remember that he's as close as a whispered prayer. He wants you to realize that his love is never fickle, like that of a cheering crowd. He wants the best for you, which is eternal life with him. Then he'll be able to hug you even tighter than he does right now. When life comes to a close, what counts is not the number of trophies you won, the amount of money you made, or how many people know your name. What matters is that you accepted Jesus as your Savior and lived your life, however humbly, to please and honor him. Never forget this: God is your biggest fan.

You'll find many other encouraging messages like this at Jack Zavada's web site:
www.inspiration-for-singles.com

We all long for love. God created each of us with a deep-seated need for affection and recognition, and that's good. How you fill that need determines your happiness in life. Some of us receive awards, scholarships, fame and applause. But others seem to struggle along, never standing out from the crowd, discouraged because their efforts don't give them the acceptance they so desperately desire. Does that sound like you? What you may not realize is that you'll have all the approval and love you'll ever need, if you seek it in the right place: from God. God is your biggest fan. He is absolutely, completely, head-over-heels in love with you. If he had a wallet, your photo would be in it. Like a true fan, he knows everything there is to know about you, from your favorite food, to what kind of music you like, to what you do for fun. God, who is the wisest being in the entire universe, thinks you are wonderful. He knows

